

Read through the statements below that show some possible reasons why Kenyans might be more tolerant towards each other.

In groups, cut out the statements and arrange them on the diamond shape on the next page. Place the one that you think is most important at the top, then the next two most important statements on the next line, and so on.

Afterwards, compare your diamond rank with other groups - do you all agree?

Kenyans come from many ethnic backgrounds

Respecting and helping others in the local community is a longstanding tradition

Under the constitution Kenyans are free to practise their religion of choice

Kenya receives many visitors from all over the world

Human rights groups are powerful and well supported in Kenya

Kenya has no armed rebel groups at war with the government

Kenya is a democratic country with the right to vote and to free speech

Kenyans are generally easy-going people

Most schools are mixed in terms of ethnic background and religious denomination

